Many Hopes believes that children who have survived injustice are the most powerful agents to defeat the injustice they have survived. We are a long-term, strategic solution to extreme poverty and abuse. Many Hopes rescues girls and boys from abusive situations and equips them with an imagination for justice and tools to act on it. We provide loving homes, excellent education, and legal advocacy to raise networks of influential adults equipped to defeat the poverty they were born into. 100% of public donations go directly to mission because private donors sponsor our operating expenses. Each project is working toward 100% self-sustainability.

GHANA

James Kofi Annan was sold into slavery at the age of 6 on Lake Volta in Ghana. After 7 years, he escaped. He excelled in school and became a banker with Barclays. Then he left his career to go back to the lake to rescue the 21,000 children still there. Today, James has rescued 1,860 children and some are now adults working alongside him to rescue others.

One of those is Alfred Quensa. Alfred was born into slavery on Lake Volta. His mother had been trafficked there as a teen. At the age of 6, without knowing how to swim, he was forced onto boats to fish 12-14 hours a day. At 11, Alfred was rescued by James and his organization. After receiving his education and graduating from university, Alfred now works on rescue missions to save others. Alfred wants to give back to the program that saved his life years earlier.
